

Now that you have watched all overview videos, we want to remind you that each state has their own requirements for working interpreters, certification and/or licensure. Some states require only certification while other states require both certification and a license. You may wonder how to find that information. Contact your local interpreting agency or the committee for Deaf and hard of hearing services or the individual who is responsible for heading up the interpreter certification in your state. Ask if Deaf interpreters are required to hold a certification, license, or both. Now that you have finished with the overview, go ahead, and continue watching the other resources we have here.
